Excerpt from The Prema-Sagara or Ocean of Love: Being a Literal Translation of the Hindi Text of Lallu Lal Kavi as Edited by the Late Professor Eastwick, Fully Annotated and Explained Grammatically, Idiomatically and Exegetically by Frederic Pincott (Member of the Royal Asiatic Society), Author of The It is well known to all who have given thought to the languages of India that the Hindi or Bhasha as the people themselves call it, is the most widely diffused and most important language of India. There are, of course, the great provincial languages - the Bengali, Marathi, Panjabi, Gujarati, Telugu, and Tamil - which are spoken by immense numbers of people, and a knowledge of which is essential to those whose lot is cast in the districts where they are spoken; but the Bhasha of northern India towers high above them all, both on account of the number of its speakers and the important administrative and commercial interests which attach to the vast stretch of territory in which it is the current form of speech. The various forms of this great Bhasha constitute the mother-tongue of about eighty-six millions of people, that is, a population almost as great as those of the French and German empires combined; and they cover the important region stretching from the Rajmahal hills on the east to Sindh on the west; and from Kashmir on the north to the borders of the Nizam's territory on the south. Necessarily there are differences, both verbal and grammatical, over a district of this vast extent; but these differences arrange themselves under two great divisions, which have been called respectively the Eastern and...
