Excerpt: . 20th anniversary of the service Dr. Parker observed: I have done nothing in it, I have simply said, Lord, speak through me. I have hardly ever known one sentence I was going to utter, but I knew every thought I wished to explain and to enforce. The One Thousandth Noonday service was held on Thursday, June 30th, 1892. The occasion was a memorable one. The building was crowded to overflowing, and many leading ministers, including the late Dr. John Pulsford, and laymen, who could not be present, sent letters of congratulation. To commemorate the event a stained glass window was placed in the City Temple at a cost of 150. When resuming the service after the summer holiday on the first Thursday in October, 1900, Dr. Parker remarked that he thought he saw signs that the Thursday morning service is, by the blessing...
