Not illustrated. 1916 Excerpt: .to handle the heavy rolls of paper, and necessarily they wear and tear more clothes than any other men in the building, except the fellows in the press division, in which I belong, because we have all this rough laborers work. Some of those fellows used to be able to borrow money, but the loan sharks are pretty well disbanded and there is no such thing as that now. And there are no arrangements like that on the outside now, so that nobody can borrow any money, because fellows will not sign the slips guaranteeing that the money will be repaid. There are numerous hardships of that kind. Now, unskilled laborers have to do the same work as the skilled laborers. For instance, we have to take the big rotary presses, and that work calls for skilled labor, but we do it. Those presses will run off at least 85,000 an hour. We box up the material and load it upon trucks, and all that sort of thing. That is the reason why I have got a wet overcoat on now. I wash the presses, and I worked up until 10 o'clock this morning. We have to work as hard as we can, and if we are a little bit late we will get Hail Columbia for it. Mr. Van Dyke. As a matter of fact they are pretty fair over there, outside of the wage scale? There is not anything except the wage scale?...
